COVID test-to-treat clinics available throughout Riverside County

Residents hoping to avoid crowded emergency rooms are being urged to be tested, then treated for COVID-19 at clinics located throughout Riverside County.

The clinics are offered by Riverside University Health System- Public Health (RUHS-PH), in partnership with OptumServe.

"We continue to see significant impacts to our hospital emergency departments with individuals seeking COVID testing and/or COVID therapeutics. We have an opportunity to remind the community that there are additional resources to assist with accessing COVID testing and medications," said Misty Plumley, program chief for Immunization and Staff Development.

The one-stop-shop allows patients to be tested for COVID, have a telehealth communication with a doctor and receive an oral antiviral treatment – all during the same visit. Riverside County, like other regions throughout the state, has seen a sharp rise in COVID-19 cases over the past several weeks.

The clinics are free and health insurance is not required to be seen and treated.

Patients may simply walk in or make an appointment here:
